Trappist monks are famous for two things: their legendary vow of silence and really, really strong beer! There are 12 monasteries which are actively brewing beer, most of which are in Belgium and Holland.

Westmalle is one of the oldest and largest abbeys and is based near Antwerp.

In 1865 the monks of Westmalle started brewing a dark Trappist beer in addition to their table beer. They adjusted the recipe in 1926, doubling the amounts of raw ingredients to produce a new, stronger beer. The resulting dark red-brown Westmalle Dubbel re-ferments in the bottle acquiring its rich and complex taste. You taste amazing touches of malt and fruits with a markedly fresh and bitter finish.
